

Thank you for allowing public comments regarding potential ability to use mobile phones in air flights. I think this would be a huge mistake in permitting this activity. The noise pollution alone in a cramped cabin when everyone in the plane is a captive audience will be disruptive and create volatile situations. I've heard too many people in airports arguing on the phone, yelling at staff, talking nonstop about mundane things. I fly approximately once a month and i consider this time to read or rest. I would abhor if someone were chattering on a phone next to me for a five hour flight and I could do nothing to get away from this behaviour especially since what i overhear is people just talking for the sake of talking.

Please do not allow cell phones aboard planes to maintain a calm and peaceful setting in where passengers don't have very much control over what is happening.

Thank you.
